I have a 140" dipole antenna that I'll be hanging sometime this week for use with my Icom I-7300. I'm in southern Maine, so If you guys were in my position would you string the antenna oriented north/south or east/west? It looks like north/south would be good for DX contacts in Europe and here in the US. East/west might make it possible for ...

To determine directions to North, South, East, and West, use the compass app or the GPS on your phone to see which direction you are facing. If you don't have your phone with you or want to use primitive methods, plant a stick upright into the ground. Then, place a rock where the stick's shadow ends to mark the spot.

Just as adapting the North, South, East and West mentality helped companies better prepare for new style of attacks--which, incidentally, is still not well employed or even non-existent for many organizations--companies must be prepared for the new breed of API attacks that are coming. The stakes are far higher.

For this reason, North-South traffic is often considered more critical than East-West. In this sense, to ensure the performance and security of North-South traffic, organizations have applied many tools. It includes the use of firewalls, intrusion detection systems, VPNs, and protocols such as TLS.
